Another Refinery Building At Once

ASSOCIATED REFINERIES LTD. NOW HAVE CHARTER.

One of the most important achievements that have been accomplished in Wainwright for some time in the formation of the "Associated Refineries Limited" which has taken over the assets and contracts of the Glyco Oil Limited which holds the production contracts of No. 33 and Edmonton-Wainwright wells. The Sasko-Wainwright Oil & Gas Limited is also in the process of supplying all its production from its No. 1 well and other wells and contracts of the next five years to this company.

When the financing arrangements are all completed, the Sasko-Wainwright Oil & Gas Limited will have large interest in this company which will assure them a market for their oil and gas.

We learn that Mrs. Martin Oyle is selling out her household, furniture and with the children is preparing to pay a visit to her home in the New England States.

NO ABOLITION OF BEER PARLORS YET

PROHIBITION ASSOC. FAILS IN DEMAND FOR BAN ON ADVERTISING

EDMONTON—Immediate abolition of the beer parlors throughout the province, prohibition of liquor advertising in newspapers, and the founding of an institution for the care of liquor addicts and amendment of the direct legislation act were four of the most important pieces of legislation sought by a delegation from the Alberta Prohibition Association, during a conference with Premier J. E. Brownlee.

After the proposals of the prohibition delegation had been outlined by Rev. W. A. Lewis, D.D., of Calgary president of the Prohibition Association the premier said the government would give the representations every consideration.

The premier also made it clear that he was a staunch supporter of prohibition legislation, because he believed it was the best thing for the country. He expressed the view that there was a definite swinging back on the part of the people to temperance measures and although he would not go as far as to say that this movement would crystallize in a demand for total prohibition he believed that some sort of modification of the present system of liquor control would be sought by the people within the next two years.

The premier stated definitely that no legislation would be introduced at the present session towards the abolition of the beer halls. He said that he had definitely warned operators of beer halls throughout the province especially in the rural districts that there was a rising tide of feeling against them and that if they did not tighten up they are liable to be swept out of existence by the will of the people themselves within the next two years.

In connection with the demand for the prohibition of liquor advertising in Alberta newspapers the premier was not very sympathetic. He said that it would not be fair to penalize the newspapers of Alberta when the government would be unable to keep out of the province newspapers from other centres which might contain liquor advertising. He said that he scanned the local papers carefully daily and he did not believe that the newspapers were using such a volume of advertising as would warrant complaint being made.

Curlers' '29 Spiel Thing Of The Past

WEATHER MADE ICE SOMEWHAT HEAVY, BUT GAMES ALL HARD FIGHT

The Spiel for 1929 is now a thing of the past, and after a long series of well-fought games, the trophies and prizes have been distributed to the various winners. Only one trophy the "Consolation" remains in town, this being the only skip out of the twenty five rinks to retain a set of prizes for Wainwright.

In fact the visiting teams were all to the merry when it came to "taking home the bacon" for no local team except Thurston's rink even landed in the trophy, and for this reason, it should be a very large entry for the '30 Spiel next year.

Many exciting games were witnessed as the different games drew near the finish, but despite every effort put forth, the Wainwright boys, seemed to be unable to get the breaks.

The following are the winning rinks of the skip's name given being the entry for the bonspiel—

Sasko-Wainwright Is Latest Producer

NEW WELL BROUGHT IN MON. MORNING; OIL RISING STEADILY

The latest producer to be brought in in the Wainwright field is the Sasko-Wainwright Oil & Gas Co., whose venture on the L.S.D. 1, on 19-45-6W4 was drilled in over the week end and has justified the faith of the directors of the company by making a very nice well.

On Monday afternoon, the oil, which is of a much lighter color and consistency, was slowly but steadily creeping up the casing from the oil sand found at the 2247-foot level, and then stood at 875 feet from the bottom of the hole. The well is being constantly bled now to ensure that the well is given every chance, and the oil taken out is being run into tankage at the well site.

Crews are now working on the rigging up of a permanent pumping plant for it is significant that just overnight the well rose approximately forty barrels in the hole.

As will be seen from another story in this issue it is the intention of this company to make immediate arrangements for the complete refining of their product, and the directors and shareholders in this venture would seem to be "petering pretty".

It is worthy of note, too, that the whole crew as well as directors are practically all local men, and the congratulations are sure due to Mr. Geo. McLeod and Mr. Geo. Morton, president and local director respectively for this great achievement as the final result of the efforts put forth by this company.

BRITISH INTERESTED IN SALT DEVELOPMENT

Two important companies one of which is the Canadian Industries Limited, representing the Maund interests of Great Britain, are showing considerable interest in the salt deposits near Fort McMurray, it was announced by Premier Brownlee to the Legislature during the past week. Interest of this kind is regarded as a very good indication of the laudable attention which will be paid to the development of the mineral wealth of the northern part of the province.

Biggest Gas Well Wainwright Field

WAINWELLS NO. 2 FINEST WELL IN CANADA ACCORDING TO PERFORMANCE

Last week saw the Wainwells' No. 2 well drilled in and the result attained has proven the biggest surprise to all the operators in the Wainwright field.

The well sure "came in," and came in with a vengeance, for since it has been pouring forth from its just over 2,000-foot level a continuous flow of splendid dry gas, which is only roughly estimated "at anywhere around one hundred million cubic feet per day."

After the drilling through of the cementing on Wednesday last, baling operations were started, and before the hole had been half lowered of its drilling mud, the tremendous gas pressure blew the baler and every thing else in the hole away up through the derrick with a roar which was heard for miles.

So great is the roar from the pressure of the gas escaping that those who are working anywhere around the site must necessarily plug their ears and away up town the noise is still very great. The baler which was shot up through the air by the gas nearly caught a couple of cars standing nearby.

During the week end the well was visited by the government engineer, Mr. Elliot of Calgary, who found his instruments quite unable to cope with the phenomenal new producer.

We understand that work is now proceeding on the No. 1 well of this company for the purpose of cleaning and deepening the hole there, and the fuel for all further work by the company is to be obtained from the new gas producer.

MILLIONS VOTED IN ALBERTA HOUSE

EDMONTON—Estimates of the railways and telephones branch the treasury department and several appropriations under the voluminous estimates of the department of agriculture, were passed by the Alberta legislature in committee of supply Tuesday evening.

Under the railways branch of the railways and telephones department of $44,517.66 from income account and $1,024,042.51 from capital account.

The telephone branch contained a total appropriation out of income account of $3,582,476 and of $1,125,000 out of capital account for construction.

Treasury department expenditures authorized totaled $912,015 out of income account and $1,700 out of capital account.

Very little discussion took place over the passage of these estimates. Agricultural estimates went nicely for a time, when Col. C. Y. Weaver, Conservative, Edmonton, precipitated a wide discussion on the scarcity of purebred cattle in Western Canada by a question he asked in connection with what the government was doing to promote higher livestock standards.

The committee rose to report when the section dealing with enforcement of the protection of game was reached some discussion being anticipated here.

AGED C.N.R. EMPLOYEE DIES VERY SUDDENLY

MR. J. FLINT FOUND DEAD IN BED; ONLY ILL FOR SHORT TIME

Mr. Joseph Flint, who for the past ten years has been on the depot staff as gateman was found dead in bed on Friday morning last. He was 68 years of age, and had been sick but a few days previous to his passing.

Dr. Wallace, the coroner, who was called, after enquiry into the circumstances decided that an inquest was not necessary, death being caused from heart failure.

The late Mr. Flint, who was born in Derbyshire, England, came to this country in 1907, after having home-schooled in Minot, N. Dakota. He took up a homestead in the Sligo district which he farmed for some ten years later coming to Wainwright and joining the staff of the C.N.R.

He leaves a brother and sister, both of whom are in the Old Country. No known relatives reside in Canada.

The funeral which was in charge of McLeod's parlors was held at St. Thomas' church on Sunday afternoon when a large congregation listened to Rev. A. M. Tremblay conduct the solemn services of the Anglican church burial service. Interment was at Wainwright cemetery.

The pallbearers were Messrs W. Arkwright, C. Freed, J. Whittle, J. Sutherland, R. Torney and T. Lissmore while among the floral tributes were: C.N.R. Employees at Wainwright, wreath; Lodge 39 B.M. of W. E. wreath; Mr. and Mrs. A. Swanson, wreath; Wainwright Merchants, wreath; and others.

TO FOSTER SALE OF QUALITY BEEF

OTTAWA—Arrangements to foster the sale of quality beef in the interest of both the consumers and the livestock producers of Canada, are now being made by the federal government.

As soon as the necessary inspectors can be appointed in local points the federal livestock department will inaugurate a policy of branded beef, with the federal government responsible for the maintenance of the high quality of the brands which it approves.

The scheme is being inaugurated in an effort of the federal department of agriculture to secure a premium for the livestock producer who raises high grade animals and at the same time to provide consumers with a standard of quality upon which they may rely.

CARD OF THANKS

To the many friends and neighbors of the late Mr. Joseph Flint the deepest thanks are extended for their kindly sympathy and assistance, and also for the beautiful floral tributes.

GRAIN MOVEMENT AT HEAD OF LAKES

Grain shipments through the Canadian ports of Port William and Port Arthur at the head of Lake Superior since this season's movement of the Western crop began until the close of navigation on December 12, exceed all previous records, amounting in all to 287,780,000 bushels, compared with 193,000,000 bushels last year. The low water level that prevailed throughout the shipping season permitted a free and rapid movement from the farms to the railways, and then by rail and mail to the seaboard.

THE CRIME CODE

"Forgive me, Contessina," I said bowing not knowing her name or who she was. To my knowledge I had never seen her before that moment. But I was joking with your father."

"As you did with His Excellency the Ambassador when you arrived from London this morning," laughed the older woman. "His wife, Lady Kingscliffe, told me about it. Then turning to me she asked: 'Are you really suffering from loss of memory as His Excellency has been fearing?'"

"His Excellency need have no cause for apprehension," I assured the elderly lady on my left. Then I turned to my other companion who was evident by the unmarried daughter of an Italian Count and we laughed together. Meanwhile my bewildered eyes were taking in every detail of that unfamiliar and unexpected scene.

The last actual recollection I had was of being helpless and terrified in the hands of that desperate gang of criminals at Chamberwell. Yet at that moment the whole scene had suddenly been transformed and I was at an official dinner given by the British Ambassador in Rome.

At the head of the table sat His Excellency a rather spare, grey haired man in his diplomatic uniform with a jeweled cross at his throat and a ribbon across his shirt front. Nearly all the other men were also in the uniform of the various countries, they represented and wearing stars, ribbons and neat rows of decorations. To my surprise I found myself also wearing diplomatic uniform with a foreign order.

The women were all smartly dressed and many were wonderful jewels which glittered and flashed beneath the electric rays. At the opposite end of the flower-decked tables sat Lady Kingscliffe a distant relative of ours whom I had known nearly all my life.

I was the guest of the Embassy in Rome. But why? All was bewildering. Why had I been invited to that stately dinner at which I had made such a confused fool of myself by unbalancing my chair and afterwards asking where I was?

To keep my mouth shut and to observe closely was the best course. All was so strange, so unreal. True I held a post at the Foreign Office but my duties did not take me abroad. Why therefore was I a guest at the same table where sitting on His Excellency's right hand was the Duke, the Dictator of Italy the greatest post-war figure in Europe Mussolini?

Bull-headed with his strong commanding countenance and wearing plain evening dress he was chatting with a young girl in pale yellow and laughing the while. I recognized him from the many photographs in the press and I remember wondering whether beneath his dress shirt he wore his famous coat of mail.

The many attempts to assassinate him had left him so cold that he had openly defied Fate declaring that he had such a charmed life, that no plot could ever cause his undoing on his death. There sat the demi-god of the Fascists at his ease in the intimacy of the dinner table?

Was it any wonder that such a scene held me enraptured? Was I really dreaming?

My table companions spoke to me on one side in English and on the other in Italian. I had not the slightest knowledge of who either of them was and what I replied I know not until this day.

At last the State dinner ended and we passed into a great ballroom with gilded ceiling and magnificent crystal chandeliers. Already a number of people had assembled and the entrance of His Britannic Majesty's representatives accompanied by the Duke was the signal for much bowing and hand-shaking. It was a brilliant cosmopolitan crowd such as in these post-war days could only assemble in the Eternal City.

The long windows of the great saloon stood open to a glorious shady garden and let in the balmy flower-scented air delightfully refreshing after the rather close atmosphere of the dining room.

Alone I stood again. How came I there? Had I been wanted to Rome upon the fairy carpet of the Arabian story? Or was it actual reality?

The orchestra struck up a lively fox trot quite unfamiliar to me. I am rather fond of dancing and with Joan as partner knew most of the popular tunes. Yet the one in question was utterly unfamiliar. I went back to the wall and standing near the door watching the brilliant spectacle of uniformed and decorated men and jeweled women. Diplomatic representatives of nearly every country in the world were there; and as always the reception of the British representative to the Quirinale was a spectacle perhaps unequalled in Europe.

I stood astounded amid the brilliant throng the dance-inspiring rhythm in my ears my senses bewildered watching the cosmopolitan dancers yet not knowing a soul except old Dickie Kingscliffe and his wife.

As members of many of the best dance clubs in London Joan and I had made our peregrinations and knew the qualities of the various floors from the Florida to the Comco. But where was she? The dance orchestra brought me back vividly on our meeting the last time I had seen her. As I stood there watching her sweet face slowly rose distinct and lovable in a pale-grey mist her adored countenance with that sweet smile on it. Yet a few seconds later before I could realize it the faint vision faded and the mist grew darkened into the night.

My brain was in a whirl in an abnormal condition. A sense of absolute boredom at once overcame me.

The pretty little Contessina with the brown eyes and shingled hair—just a trifle too light for an Italian I thought—was dancing with the tall

French military attaché, while my other table companion the elderly Englishwoman had as partner a somewhat obese Italian perhaps a deputy because of the crown of Cavalier of the Order of the Crown of Italy.

My attention was centered on the little Contessina. She presented a smart figure of perfect line and a graceful movement charming in pale fuchsia with a necklace of pearls and a magnificent bracelet of rubies and diamonds. Once again she caught my eye and smiled over the shoulder of the elegant and lavishly decorated partner.

While standing there Her Excellency Lady Kingscliffe approached me and we stood to gossip. After her husband's return from the Legation at Brussels before my strange adventure in Chamberwell, I had known her ladyship well in London. Dickie Kingscliffe had had a long and distinguished career at the Foreign Office. He was the kind of man who had secured rapid promotion by being dumped in to any vacancy abroad that occurred.

Before the Sovereign had conferred on him the Knight of Commander of St. Michael and George, Kingscliffe had spent many weary years in the Do-nothing Department at Downing Street. Later he had been sent out because he dressed well entertained well and was able to see without seeing.

He speak without saying anything, according to true Foreign Office traditions—first to Constantinople as second secretary then to Paris as first secretary, and after that he had drifted along as Minister at Lisbon. Later on again he had been sent to Copenhagen and to Brussels until one of the best paid posts as full-fledged "Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the gay Court of the Quirinale."

"Well my dear Lionel!" exclaimed Her Excellency "I hope you don't feel disappointed after your journey from London? It was awfully kind of you to bring me those things from Bromley's in the bag. My maid gave them to me just as I was dressing."

I bowed expressing delight at being able to do any little service for her yet entirely ignorant of having brought anything from London of "every travelling to Rome."

"By the way," she went on "how is your father? I haven't seen him for ages. Is that he often speaks in the House?"

I replied that as I travelled a great deal I saw very little of him but as for as I knew he was just well. At that instant there flashed through my brain the memory of that last dramatic midnight interview in the fog at Denmark Hill station.

What had occurred since then? All was a perfect blank to me.

"Twice the Contessina re-passed me as I stood with Her Excellency, and each time she gave me a sunny smile of recognition. The pretty girl intrigued me. There was some curious feature about her; one that I could not more fathom than the depths of mystery into which I had been plunged. Somehow I felt confident that we had met before but where, I could not recall. The smile that played about her lips seemed familiar. In a hazy sort of way I felt that she was my intimate friend and that she was enjoying my failure to recognize her Presently I asked Her Excellency: "Who is the little lady who sat next to me at dinner? Look! She's over there with the French military attaché."

"O the Contessina! We met her a few weeks ago at the Spaniards"—meaning the Spanish Embassy—"She was with a Baroness Bohn her chaperon. She seems to be well known and popular for she goes everywhere in Rome. Her name is Angela Ugostini daughter of Count Ugostini of Ravenna."

"She is very charming. Don't you think so Excellency?" I said as my eyes wandered around the great ball room after her.

"What!" cried the Ambassador's wife in feigned protest. "Don't you remember her in London you told me that you thought no man who carried dispatches should ever marry? And yet you are admiring a pretty girl. Well my dear Lionel I'm really surprised! I admit that you held that opinion before you knew Joan."

Joan the name stirred highly strung chords within my memory. Joan! My beloved! Though torn by emotion I strove frantically to remain unconcerned.

"Two years ago I first met her at your house Lady Kingscliffe. I remark that my declaration was made before that."

"My dear Lionel your idea of time is most erratic! Why what are you thinking of? Are you dreaming? We have been in Rome nearly two years. It must have been over four years ago."

I remained silent. If what Her Excellency said was correct then I had lost all knowledge of about two years of my life—of where I had been of what acts I had committed or of what friendships or enemies I had made. I had a blank in my life of two whole years to fill.

"You know nowadays my dear boy you are always a little vague on some points. Joan has told me so. I wonder why it is? Perhaps so much travelling is affecting you?" she remarked.

"What has Joan said?" I asked wondering what had happened to me during those two lost years.

"Oh she's such a sweet girl Lionel! I really wonder that you treat her as you do. Lady Kingscliffe reproachfully but I think I suppose it is no affair of mine so let's talk of something else."

"Will you dance? I asked.

"I'd rather not," she declared gracefully. "I'm a trifle tired. Tomorrow night there is the State ball at the Quirinale. You were at the last one two months ago. I see the Minister of the Household the Marquis Visconti over there! I'll ask him to send you a command to the Excelsior."

I thanked her profusely. She was quite unaware that she had unconsciously given me information of which I had been sorely in need—namely the name of the hotel in which I was staying.

"You recollect that dainty little Mar chese Pozzoli—you had supper with her at the last State ball—she's just died very mysteriously in Palermo—poor little woman. All Rome is talking of it. Poor lady is hinted at. Her husband soon afterwards went off to Paris with La Palala the dancer," she added significantly.

"How very tragic!" I replied. Then (Continued on page 7)

BOB DAVIS RECALLS: A Column of Conversation With a Star of the Silver Screen

"Hello! This is Tom Meighan speaking." "At your service." "Do you play golf?" "Not often, but I do." "Meet me tomorrow morning. Fresh Meadow Club, Long Island, 10 o'clock. I'll send my car for you. All right?" "O.K." "Which is Lavin for O.K."

What motion picture people talk about was the thought that came to me. Was I in for thirty-six holes of archaological reminiscence built on the triumph of a celluloid career? Was it the plan of this engaging young fishman to exhaust the subject of himself to myself? Thirty-six chapters of movie monomania on thirty-six fairways? And in the rough!

What is the dominant color of the landscape? It is the green of the grass as we walked on the fifteenth driving tee. I opined that it might be green. "As yet I haven't seen it," he replied. "Look across these hills and forget that we are standing on a lawn. What do you get for your distance? Different shades of purple; a sort of purple haze. The sky is a light shade of purple. The clouds are purple. Old houses and fences and stone walls have a dull purple tone. I think there is something in it. The autumn is just a mass of purple. At any rate, that is how it seems to me." From the landscape we turned across the continent to San Quentin penitentiary. "I was visiting that institution once and saw in a high stone chamber half a dozen thirty-foot hemp ropes hanging from the rafters. Suspended from each rope was a three or four hundred pound stone, put there to take the stretch out of the hemp. You get the idea? Careful preparation to break a man's neck. Written on the wall I found a single line from Omar Khayyam: 'Oh! make haste.' That's a terrible thought, isn't it? The other day I heard a very dramatic story about a boy who disappeared from a town out West. His folks spent a great deal of money searching for him. After ten years they got word from some mysterious source that the boy was a prisoner in a penitentiary. Using what little money they had left, the mother and father came on to verify the story."

The warden received them with the information that such a prisoner as the one described had been in inmate there for a period of eight years, but that he had died of pneumonia half an hour before the arrival of his parents. No novelist could cook up so tragic a tale as that. The truth is always more interesting than mere fiction. I don't know how the old folks took the news, but to my way of thinking, they should have taken consolation out of the fact that when a convict dies he escapes."

With that philosophical observation Tom Meighan stepped up to the ball and sliced another long shot into the rough. A stocky youth in a sweater suit of brown knicker came swinging toward us. "Here comes Gene Sarazan," said Tommy under his breath. "Don't tell him I sliced him my tee shot. He has been trying to break me of the habit, but he doesn't know, as you do, that I was bounced from seven public and three private schools for unqualified and unalterable stupidity."

Thirty-six holes, succulent ham and eggs, an awful of entertaining observation and not a word about the pictures. One perfect day.

learn anything. Very few really smart people in the world. I mean, profound people. Superficially everywhere. Lots of successful people, but when it comes to depth they aren't there. I never saw them in the infernal game. Do you know Booth Tarkenton?

"You have named the only living author whom I have never met and have never seen," I admitted. "You've got something to look forward to. All great men are endowed with simplicity. The greatest they are the simpler they are. Tarkenton is the most remarkable man I know. You had better get busy and meet him. I'll arrange it. He knows more things worth knowing than anybody. Lord, what a personality! George Ade is another. Kindly, brilliant and considerate. Simplicity is the thing. Lincoln had it. Edison has it. Famous people are N. C."

Nothing so far about million dollar productions, knockouts, contracts in seven figures, directors' wars, scenic writers' lookings or profits.

"What is the dominant color of the landscape? It is the green of the grass as we walked on the fifteenth driving tee. I opined that it might be green. 'As yet I haven't seen it,' he replied. 'Look across these hills and forget that we are standing on a lawn. What do you get for your distance? Different shades of purple; a sort of purple haze. The sky is a light shade of purple. The clouds are purple. Old houses and fences and stone walls have a dull purple tone. I think there is something in it. The autumn is just a mass of purple. At any rate, that is how it seems to me.'"

From the landscape we turned across the continent to San Quentin penitentiary. "I was visiting that institution once and saw in a high stone chamber half a dozen thirty-foot hemp ropes hanging from the rafters. Suspended from each rope was a three or four hundred pound stone, put there to take the stretch out of the hemp. You get the idea? Careful preparation to break a man's neck. Written on the wall I found a single line from Omar Khayyam: 'Oh! make haste.' That's a terrible thought, isn't it? PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS OF CANADA, LIMITED

Scenic views along the route. Sinclair Canyon, Calgary and the Locks of South Sea. Marie, Canada, as the Laurent Hotel at Victoria. Victoria, Vancouver, Chateau Lake Louise.

Dean Sinclair Laird of Macdonald College, St. Anne de Bellevue is better known as an educationist than a philanthropist but he is really both. Some years ago he made a tour of the Canadian west. His time was spent of less limited and in planning his itinerary he was obliged to miss several points he considered worth while and to spend more time than he thought necessary in places less interesting. While he made up his mind that this condition should not obtain if he made the trip again, he was greatly thrilled by his journey. The beauty and the wonder of the Canadian west deeply impressed him and he returned, as he says, with a more sympathetic understanding of the western people and problems and was thoroughly convinced that the education of a Canadian can not begin until he has seen his own country.

It was his idea that if a tour could be organized at reasonable cost, to cover all the important cities and resorts west of Toronto, and the participants were assured of relief from all the worries of the trip, he would be interested in sponsoring a special train.

Thus the first "Dean Laird Special" came into existence and this year, for the sixth time, and in conjunction with the Canadian Pacific Railway the Dean is again organizing a de luxe all-expense tour for a stated sum, affords the maximum of enjoyment and variety of scene and recreation that can be provided in three summer weeks.

Dean Laird devotes a great deal of time and energy to his tour and each year goes over much of the same ground, but he now knows the high spots in western travel, and by carrying on year after year he is making his contribution towards a greater and more united Canada. Altogether, Mr. Laird has piloted some fifteen hundred people through the great cities and scenic spots of the west. Montreal and Victoria—Banff, Lake Louise, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver—over a diversified route. He has found that, while the travellers appreciate having a special train at home and base, they appreciate the Great Lakes and optional motor tours, so that the steamships and the motor cars are very generally used by him.

The Dean is doing a great work and the only qualifications he demands from applicants or membership in his tour are competence and the capacity for enjoyment.

Health Service of the CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION RURAL HEALTH UNITS

Up and the present time, the knowledge which has been applied in cities much more than has been in the small town and rural areas.
Practically all cases of any importance have organized health departments with trained workers in charge of the various activities carried on by the Department.

The small town and rural areas, as a result of the lack of health work are in general not as healthy as are the cities. In other words, those who live in the cities are more free from preventable disease because the cities have organized health departments which protect the citizens from preventable diseases. It has been the hope of those who have given thought to this problem of rural health, that some scheme might be devised where by those living outside the cities would receive the same measure of protection from disease as those living in the cities.

The County of Rural Health Unit seems to offer a practical means for obtaining this most desirable end.
The idea is to organize in a county or some similar area, a health department which would be staffed by full-time trained workers. This is the county would be served in a health way by a health organization similar to that which has done so much good in the cities. By combining the rural area and the small towns, there is a sufficient population to support such a service. The health workers in such a unit must be trained and must devote their whole time to this health work.

The plan is well started in some provinces. It is becoming practical for those living outside the cities to secure organized health protection. This must be the case, however, as has been the case with the city dwellers, to pay the cost of such money to keep well but it costs far less to keep well than to be ill.

BRITISH HARVESTERS

ANXIOUS TO RETURN

W. C. Osmond, official observer of the British harvesters' movement, for the British Government who has been in Canada for some months has returned to the old land. At a luncheon given in his honor at Winnipeg Mr. Osmond stated that the harvesters he had received from the Imperial Government was that some 1,500 of the British harvesters who had returned from Canada were anxious to make arrangements to come out again to this country to become settled. A plan is now announced in Britain for assist these men to return, by having them qualify for a low fare by undergoing a four weeks' course in clearing land and handling horses. Only those harvesters who stayed in Canada for a reasonable length of time will be accepted.

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA, MARCH 6th, 1929

Be useless. That is the first and the final commandment for those who would be useful, and happy in their usefulness.

CHARLES W. ELIOT

GOOD SEED

Only the soil itself, is a more important factor in the growing of crops than the seed used. Soil and its fertility can to a limited degree only be controlled by the operator while on the other hand all users of seed have it within their power to control the quality of the seed put into the ground.

Although much attention within recent years has been directed to the prime necessity of only good seed being used it is nevertheless a fact that experiments carried out by the Dominion Seed Bureau throughout the prairie provinces in securing samples from farmers' seed drills at the time of seeding indicate a deplorable condition. The survey undertaken demonstrates that in a very large percentage of cases, wheat and barley are unsuitable for seed being sown.

The question might be asked as to why such a condition should exist. Three reasons suggest themselves. Is it ignorance? Is it carelessness? Is it false economy? The first may apply to new settlers but certainly should not apply to experienced farmers. With present day facilities and opportunities should no longer be considered an excuse. Carelessness is one of the greatest enemies of human progress and undoubtedly responsible for much of the poor quality of seed. Better selection and cleaning. But in the last suggestion, cheap seed is dear at any price. If one were offered an apparently first class horse at a low price one would immediately start looking for defects. Many farmers buy cheap seed and never attempt to question its quality.

Governments have passed seed and weed laws in an endeavor to protect the farmer and improve agriculture. No doubt such legislation has had great beneficial results, but nevertheless it has not achieved the desired improvement, mainly because a law cannot be effectively enforced against the will or indifference of the people. Public opinion must be educated and aroused throughout the country to the importance and necessity of using good seed. World competition is becoming keener year by year and Alberta and Western Canadian farmers are now confronted by the fact that unless every energy is exerted toward high quality production we can not hope to hold the place we have attained in the markets of the world—Eliot.

ALBERTA JOINS

RATE FIGHT

The agricultural and colonization committee of the Alberta legislature has passed a resolution endorsing the campaign of the United Farmers of British Columbia for a revision of the domestic rate on grain to the Pacific Coast and equalization of western freight rates with those paid to Fort William generally. The opportunity was seized by Premier Brownlee to announce that his government was prepared to co-operate with the Dominion in the movement to secure a reduction in the freight of grain. The appeal of the United Farmers of British Columbia has been approved by the legislature, farmer organizations of the three prairie provinces and in new before the federal government for consideration. There is considerable basis for expecting a favorable verdict for this is the first time the four western provinces have presented anything like a solid front on the freight rate question.

The appeal to Ottawa embodies three main demands:

1. That export grain rates on the Canadian Pacific railway to Vancouver be reduced to the level obtaining to Fort William which means a reduction of two cents per 100 pounds on the rates from Calgary to Vancouver, or 18 cents instead of 20 cents now paid.
2. That domestic grain and flour rates on the Canadian National railway and Canadian Pacific railway to Vancouver be reduced to the level obtaining to Fort William which means a reduction on the Canadian National railway at 21 1/2 cents and on the Canadian Pacific, 22 1/2 cents and 100 pounds or 20 cents from Edmonton instead of 4 1/2 cents now paid and 18 cents from Calgary instead of 4 1/2 cents now paid.

3. The removal of the mountain differential in all freight rates covering the movement of all traffic in, to, from or through British Columbia. With the west united in the view that present railway schedules discriminate against the west in favor of the east, and with the recognition that British Columbia and Alberta are being penalized more particularly there is good cause to hope that a real equalization in freight rates is not far removed. The railways have opposed this course on the ancient excuse of extra Rocky Mountain operation cost, but as pointed out by the chairman of the Railway Board in 1926 the Canadian Pacific Railway "having received large subsidies for the express purpose of overcoming the physical difficulties throughout the system cannot now in justice urge these difficulties to uphold a discriminatory scale of rates which such subsidies were given to overcome." Alberta is just as much interested as British Columbia in the removal of unfair and arbitrary rates across the mountains to the western ocean.

NEW CHEVROLET SIX ON

DISPLAY HERE CREATES

GREAT INTEREST

Motorists and would-be motorists are flocking to the Chevrolet showroom to see the first of the new six-cylinder cars. Since the new model went on display interested visitors have commented on the remarkable achievement which is exemplified by these "sixes" in the price-range of the four.

Mr. Forster of the local dealer organization, expressed his satisfaction at the great interest being manifest in the new car. "General Motors made an investment of more than $30,000,000 in the change from a four to a six he said 'confident that this investment would be justified in the public's appreciation of the greater value they are enabled to receive. The car which is now on display in our showrooms is the result of four years of experiment and testing.'

It was pointed out that to change over production from a four to a six in less than two months was an accomplishment never recorded in industrial history. "Very little has been heard of this transformation outside of motor trade circles, because of the smoothness with which it was handled," said Mr. Forster "but nevertheless it has been described as the most remarkable industrial transformation ever accomplished. We are indeed proud to be able to deliver the new cars as a result of this achievement shortly after the receipt of orders."

Numerous favorable comments on the appearance of the car were heard from visitors to the showroom and those who have had a demonstration vouch for the smoothness of its six-cylinder performance and the mill-minute speed of which it is capable. The local dealer extends to all a cordial invitation to call at the showroom and look the new cars over.

SCORES HIT IN GIVEN-UP ROLE

One of the most gripping and thrilling pictures of the season is "The Bugle Call" Jacky Cooper's new starring vehicle showing Monday Tuesday and Wednesday at the Elite Theatre. It is an Edward Sedgwick production with Claire Windsor and Herbert Rawlinson heading an extremely capable cast. It is young Cooper's first nearly grown-up role, and is human-interest story of the days just before the Civil War told against a background of battles between the cavaliers and the red men.

Jacky plays the part of a big boy at a Western cavalry camp who harbors a deep and loyal devotion to the memory of his dead mother. His mother is married and commands the boy to address his sympathies to another and to transfer his affections to her. The ensuing conflict which ends happily in the boy's capitulation provides many dramatic scenes with a climax that brings applause from every audience.

Charles Windom, the stepmother and Herbert Rawlinson as the boy's father contribute vastly to the success of the film which has been produced on an elaborate and impressive scale.

as the name slowly brought forth memories. I remembered her, for I had known Italy and Switzerland fairly well. A black-eyed dark-haired merry little woman of twenty-five she had been a most graceful dancer and a cheery companion. Before her marriage she had been one of the Strozzi of Florence; since her union with Potenza she had been a particularly bright personage in Rome society, and was, in the Palace of Strozzi, the Via Babuino had been among the most brilliant in the winter season. "Do you think Enrico murdered her?" I whispered. "Yes," she whispered in turn warningly. "One must not dare suggest such a thing here. I happen to know that Ghelardi, chief of the Pubblica Sicurezza, is making some searching inquiries. The Duke told Richard so two days ago. Of course that is strictly entre nous; she added bending and speaking in a low voice. "Mussolini strode past and suddenly halted laughing to speak with the Ambassador; hence I left her side and a moment later found the Little Countess who had just been conducted back to her seat by a young attaché who had been her partner. "Won't you dance Contessina?" I asked her in French. With that sweet smile I needed to recognize in the misty vista of the past she replied gaily in the affirmative.

Conversation was rendered difficult for me because each moment in my bewilderment I feared making some faux pas. Now that I was at her side the sweeter and more charming she appeared. To Lady Kingscliff I supposed I had unconsciously betrayed an infatuation; for I recollect her reproachful words concerning Joan. "Joan! She was only a shadow in the first mist a half-forgotten memory of long-ago days. That night amid the brilliant scene of jewel-bedecked women and uniformed men I had awakened to a new existence and had begun life afresh."

I was infatuated with the Contessina Angeli I confess to it. Her beauty her grace her charm her soft speech overwhelmed me.

While we were dancing I complimented her on her steps which were indeed new to me though I found I could dance them. But among several things which struck me as curious concerning her was that though she spoke Italian it was with a decided foreign accent. Neither was the softness of her features that of an Italian yet perhaps her mother had been a foreigner. Besides there are I argued many people brought up in childhood and youth who cannot speak their own language properly.

As I held her while we danced she greatly intrigued me especially after what Lady Kingscliff had told me. She and her companion the Baroness Boin it seemed had suddenly appeared in Rome society and so charming was the little Contessina and so cleverly had she "climbed" that the exclusive society in the Eternal City had quickly accepted her.

"I suppose you are going to the Quirinale tomorrow night?" she asked me just before the fox trot ended.

I replied in the affirmative and expressed a profound hope that we should meet there.

"I sincerely trust that we shall also be met in a voice which struck me as extremely curious. 'Perhaps before Who knows? And she laughed. 'Really Contessina I don't quite understand you! I said much puzzled as I bowed her to her seat.

"Nowadays you don't understand many things Signor Hipwell" was her reply as she smiled to him turning to greet a newcomer who came to invite her for the next dance.

Ten minutes later I got my hat and coat. A flunkey had called taxi and I drove to the great hotel de luxe the Excelsior in which by mere chance I had ascertained I had my temporary abode.

After I had ascended the broad blue carpeted marble stairs not knowing the number of my room I went to the concierge and asked for my key. I was given it and on it was the number of a second floor apartment, large and luxurious quarters with all the appointments of a modern hotel of the first class.

I saw the dark-grey clothes I had unconsciously worn that day neatly folded upon a chair. Upon a stand was a hairbrush suit-case completely covered with labels of Continental hotels. A small hand-bag was upon a chair and upon the writing table was a letter addressed to me. Apparently it had been delivered that evening. The stamp was a Swiss one.

I tore it open. Written in an educated hand there was a brief letter dated from an address in Lausanne, Switzerland as follows. "My Adored Lionel—I have waited hourly for two whole weeks for reply to the urgent message I sent you to London. I can bear the awful suspense no longer. I am in grave peril with enemies surrounding me, and am alone and defenseless. Be extremely careful of your dear self on your journey. They will not hesitate to kill you as I have already proved to you. I am leaving for London tomorrow. If I consider it safe and will call on you. Meanwhile, wire me your decision to my club in London and all so here I shall then know how to act. All my fondest love, dear heart, from your devoted wife,

"LILONA"

MY WIFE LILONA! Who was she? In the two years of my unconsciousness I had evidently married!

CONTINUATION OF Garnet Wheat May

It developed that Canadian millers handle about one quarter of the merchantable wheat produced in the Dominion it was suggested that a shipment consisting of about eight or ten thousand bushels of Garnet wheat should be shipped to Great Britain and other countries buying our wheat in considerable quantity this wheat to be sold to millers in the different countries and their comments and findings in connection therewith asked for. It was suggested that some part of the wheat collected for shipment might be used by certain Canadian millers who would also be asked for their comments. It was further agreed that providing that no seriously adverse criticisms were received from foreign millers the Grain Board would be expected to allow Garnet to go in to the same grade as Marquis for the 1929 crop.

These suggestions were all agreed to by the meeting and the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Trade and Commerce will proceed at once to secure the necessary quantities of first-class Garnet wheat to make up this shipment and to see that it gets into the hands of millers in Great Britain and other countries of Europe purchasing Canadian wheat. These millers will be requested to report upon their experience with the Garnet wheat handled by them. At the same time, samples of the shipment in relatively small commercial quantities will be supplied to certain Canadian millers who will also be asked to report upon their experience in connection with milling and handling the flour therefrom.

NOT WHAT TO EAT

BUT HOW, QUESTION

TORONTO—In order to be healthy and to enjoy long life it is necessary to know how to eat. The question of what to eat does not enter into this phase of health procedure. According to the health specialists the majority of people do not know how to accomplish this end and the result is that they suffer from various minor illnesses and in any event suffer discomfort. The following rules should be adopted by everyone.

1 Never eat when you are tired

3 Never eat when you are going to do things that are upsetting.
4 Eat sparingly anything you like when you are hungry.
5 Do not think you must have three meals per day.

ADVERTISING PAYS

The Battle of January:

January was a momentous month for wheat producers the world over. Canadian farmers had delivered nearly four hundred million bushels of wheat. Argentina and Australia were commencing the delivery of unusually large crops. There was an immense visible supply of wheat. The market commenced to sag. The one optimistic feature in a rather gloomy picture was the Canadian Wheat Pool. Just what the Pool stood for is told in candid language by George Broomhall, the British grain authority in "Milling."

"Prices were put down on the plea that Argentina must sell more of her new crop, and, in fact, shippers did put out lower offers and some Canadian sellers followed the downward lead.

"But it was soon found that the Canadian Pool refused to offer or sell at the lower prices, and, of course, this gave Argentina shippers courage to work for a reaction.

"The action of the Canadian Pool also gave buyers confidence, and they not only found they needed wheat but that they could pay better rates for it.

"As long as sellers were willing to 'cut' prices, buyers were quite prepared to stand back and let them do still more 'cutting' and quite possibly there might have been a bad slump had not the Canadian Pool taken a strong stand.

"The Canadian Pool Managers

certainly deserve credit for courageous handling of a difficult situation and their action proves that farmers members of the Pool would not agree to low prices at this period of the season.

"The lesson of the price movements of wheat in the past week is that emphasis must be given to the power of strong holders to maintain prices.

"Past experience showed that a crowd of weak holders was almost at the mercy of buyers in times of plenty.

"I think all must now recognize the commanding position of the Canadian Pool, and the readiness of Argentine shippers to follow a strong upward lead."

Miss Linnett Evans sang two songs which were greatly appreciated and we hope to hear her again. Dues were rendered by Mrs. Darling and Mrs.
Muggrave in a pleasing manner. Mrs.
Rice was the accompanist and carried out her part in a most creditable manner. Mr. H. Spencer president gave the address of welcome and spoke on "A closer and greater need for co-operative understanding so that if a testing time should ever come there would be unity that would stand and shock."

The directors' report and the minutes of last annual meeting were read by Secretary H. Woodruff. The report pointed out the decision of a large hardware department in the Edgerton block in which it is hoped to carry a full line of goods.

The financial statement a printed copy of which had been placed in the hands of the share-holders was explained by the manager Mr. T. Swindle burst to the entire satisfaction of the meeting.

The three retiring directors, Messrs
H. Spencer, W. Kerr and H. Woodruff were elected by acclamation.

Mr. R. Taylor at the request of the meeting gave a very interesting talk on the Peace River country where he is now farming.

The singing of the National Anthem closed a most enjoyable afternoon.
